About Laci

Laci Grigsby is a leadership coach and trainer committed to helping individuals and teams grow through intentional development, practical strategies, and transformative action. With a mission to add value to every person she encounters, Laci partners with owners, CEOs, executive leaders, and emerging leaders across a wide range of industries. She brings both warmth and precision to every coaching session, workshop, and training she facilitates, creating an environment that is structured yet approachable, challenging yet encouraging. Known for her ability to build strong, trust-based relationships, Laci is often described as both grounded and inviting, making it easy for leaders to open up, reflect, and grow.

Prior to stepping into the world of leadership development, Laci spent over a decade in the classroom, where she developed a deep understanding of the unique challenges educators face. Her background gives her a unique edge when coaching school-based leaders, particularly in the areas of instructional practice, student outcomes, and professional development strategy. Her work in education continues to inform her holistic approach in developing the individual, not just the role.

Today, Laci designs and delivers workshops, development sessions, and one-on-one coaching experiences tailored to the needs of impactful leaders. She helps her clients reflect, assess, and create clear, actionable plans that support both personal and professional growth. Her signature framework—Information. Application. Transformation.—guides leaders from learning to lasting change.

Laci lives in Kentucky with her husband, Jordan, and their two children. Outside of coaching, she is active in her local Church and CrossFit community and passionate about living a life of health, strength, and service.
